The simplicity of the user interface of websites and software is of particular importance. Almost all users prefer a comprehensible and simple platform for such a multi-purpose exchange. The Gate.io interface is almost simple.

The various features and capabilities of this exchange make this user interface confusing, but on the other hand, these capabilities also have many advantages. From the main menu, users can easily access various trading options such as margin trading, lending, borrowing, financial services, token platform (IEO) and wallet review, and more.

Overall, the user interface of this exchange looks cluttered due to a large number of features, but its good point is that it has three different modes that can be selected. examine them in the following.

In this exchange, limited orders (Limit Order), Grid Trading and Time Condition orders can be done. Limit Order works like all other exchanges; the user enters the coin price and the order enters the order book immediately. If the price reaches the selected level, the order will be completed. Grid Trading allows the user to set an order that only enters the Order Book when the selected price conditions are met.

These orders are entered into the order book based on the selected time interval; this means that the user can place orders at set intervals, provided the purchase is made within a few hours. Unlike some other exchanges, Gate.io offers margin trading. This service is useful, but for professional traders.

Although the use of the Gate.io trading platform is suitable for new and experienced traders, the user interface is less user-friendly compared to competitors such as KuCoin or Binance. Gate.io accepts more than 100 cryptocurrencies, including BTC, ETH, XRP, XLM, BSCS, and EOS. This exchange does not accept Fiat deposits. Therefore, traders need to convert traditional currencies to cryptocurrencies in order to use this platform.

It should be noted that the Universal 2nd Factor or U2F security key is currently the safest method of protection, but the Gate.io exchange does not use it. Even with the authentication for this exchange, the exchange is still unlicensed and its legal status is not entirely clear. It should be noted that the Gate.io exchange system was hit by a security breach in 2019, but the stolen funds were returned in an unknown way.

The previous version of this exchange (Bter.com) was also repeatedly targeted by hackers and lost around 7,000 BTC units. As already mentioned the hacker's attack was the reason for the closure and reopening of the Gate.io exchange. Despite this security background, Gate.io is one of the most secure cryptocurrency trading platforms and its development team is working to improve security.
