Which Countries Are Most Prepared to Accept Metaverse?

Accept Metaverse- Whether or not consumers are ready, the metaverse and digital reality experiences are rushing toward them. However, from a technological perspective, some parts of the world are more ready to embrace the digital future. A new study by Uswitch, an internet and telephone service researcher, looked at a combination of fixed broadband speeds, broadband package prices, the number of blockchain financial start-ups, and the price of high technology exports to determine which countries have the capacity to embrace the metaverse. At the top of the list is the Netherlands, with the most favorable conditions for using this technology. According to the survey, the Netherlands has one of the highest average fixed broadband speeds at 106.51 Mbps. Last year, the country also produced roughly $6,000 of high-technology exports per capita. According to another survey, the Netherlands also ranked first for interest in the metaverse from a consumer perspective. The Netherlands are followed by Switzerland, Lithuania, Malta and France. All countries in the top five spaces are known for showing interest in the emerging Web3 space.
