

I Have No Opinion on Ripple Anymore, Charles Hoskinson Says

Latest (XRP) Ripple News - Cardano \(ADA\) founder Charles Hoskinson said he would no longer talk about Ripple and its native token XRP, citing malicious attacks from the community. Hoskinson said the attack stemmed from his statements during a Dec. 16 webcast regarding the ongoing Ripple and Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) lawsuits that he accused of colluding with regulators. In that regard, Hoskinson previously said a source close to the matter told him the case would be closed on December 15. However, the deadline was missed, Hoskinson noted that he was again attacked by the XRP community, accusing him of being a liar. Hoskinson, who is also co-founder of Ethereum (ETH), said the attack was unjustified and sided with Ripple. He explained that collaborating with the XRP community has become difficult over the years, which is why he has made the decision to stop talking about the project in general.
