\(Review andd Forex Rebates up to 85%\) Forex Market Update This morning, the greenback is trading lower against most of the major currencies, ahead of the US initial weekly jobless claims data, set for release in a few hours. The GBP is trading higher against the USD. Data showed that Britain's BBA mortgage approvals unexpectedly dropped but continued to show strength in the nation's mortgage market. The Japanese Yen nudged higher against the USD, after minutes of the BoJ's latest monetary policy meeting revealed that the nation's economy has been showing continuing improvement at a moderate pace. The central bank also mentioned that it would not hesitate to inject additional stimulus in to the economy, if underlying price trends weaken. However, the board members expressed concerns on weakness from commodity-exporting economies, as it poses a downside risk to the economy. Separately, the BoJ Governor, Haruhiko Kuroda, stated that the central bank's stimulus efforts have boosted the economy in fighting deflation and it is on track to achieve its 2.0% inflation target. Yesterday, the greenback traded higher in the New York session against the key currencies. However, gains in the US dollar were trimmed, after data released showed weaker than expected durable goods orders data in November, dampening optimism about the country's economic expansion. Additionally, sales of new homes in the US slowed at a more than expected pace, indicating that the housing market is losing momentum as the comes year comes to an end. EURUSD This morning at 10:40 GMT, the
